AT THE BLOOD BANK

From the home towns of America to the battle zones of Korea, our "Flying Lifeline" spans the Pacific ... precious pints of critically needed whole blood and plasma are speeded to our wounded combat forces via the Military Air Transport Service; then in a matter of hours ... in Fairchild C-119 Packets to the front lines.

This is only one of the many top priority military cargoes flown by the rugged, battle-tested C-119 "Flying Boxcars," the mainspring of our mobile Armed Forces, airlifting everything from medical supplies and tanks, to pontoons and paratroopers. Whatever is needed, wherever it's needed, Fairchild's "Flying Boxcars" can and are delivering the goods!

Our ARMED FORCES
need your BLOOD.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or manuscript. The text is densely packed and covers the entire page, with some visible ink bleed-through from the reverse side. The script is a form of cursive, possibly from the 17th or 18th century, and the ink is dark on a light-colored paper. The text is written in a single column and appears to be a continuous narrative or a list of items. The handwriting is somewhat slanted and the letters are closely connected, characteristic of cursive script. There are some larger, more distinct letters that might serve as initials or section markers. The overall appearance is that of an old, well-used document.
